

Abstract

[00025] A method of printing an image identifier from a media tab, comprising the steps of: printing at least a portion of a first image on a first section of a media; printing at least a portion of a second image on a second section of the media such that the first and second sections are detachably connected; and detaching the second section from the first section such that the second image can be utilized as an identifier for the first image.